BOOTHAM BAR AND MINSTER, YORK. Bootham Bar is the gate of the city of York which is the entrance from the north west. It occupies the site of one of the gates of the Roman city, Eboracum, and was built at various dates, part being Roman work, and the rest dating from the 14th and 16th centuries. The turrets bear figures similar to those at Micklegate. In the picture we get a fine view of the stately Minster, the largest of English mediæval cathedrals.
